

How Children Can Improve a Person's Life

Name

Course

Tutor

Institution

Date

How Children Can Improve a Person's Life

Human beings between the stages of birth and puberty are children. It is a well-known fact that children play an important role in our society for very clear reasons. Some people view children as an integral part of a family, so a family without a child is often considered incomplete. There are two views on having children. Some people think that it is right to have children after marriage, others view them as a future asset. Regarding the latter viewpoint, children are born then they grow up and help the family acquire resources for their own benefit. According to Derevenski and Sofaer, children contribute to material culture, since they perceive, react, and add to the world through material culture as objects of the child's experience. Images of children are materially presented and perceived. Children are not removed from the material world but are critical to it (Derevenski & Sofaer 15).

The fact that every child can contribute positively to each society is the main factor that makes them an integral part of every community. That's why much attention should be paid to raising children, giving them an opportunity to study and develop all the necessary skills that will be useful in their future careers. Adults should do everything possible to support children and create all the necessary conditions to help them realize their potential. Children are not only beneficial to a certain person, but to a society as well. That's why the government pays much attention to protect children and to assist them in studying and developing so that they become responsible and valuable citizens. Moreover, all children should have equal rights and opportunities, no matter the color of their skin, religious beliefs, or economic status.

In spite of all the benefits of having children, it is necessary to talk about troubles they can cause. Bringing up children can be a very stressful experience. That's why it is crucial to keep in mind the factors you should pay attention to in order to help children become valuable and productive citizens. It is important that parents pay attention to what their children like, their strengths, or what they have a particular interest in, and then encourage these attributes. That way, they may develop certain skills that are likely to be useful in their future careers. Another important thing is to help children get ready to realize that the world is full of challenges, and they should not be afraid to overcome obstacles and make the right decisions.

Children should not be viewed as future assets only. They will likely become an important part of the society, as well as help their family. But every person should be viewed as a more complex phenomenon. Additionally, children should not be viewed as tools of relieving stress. Of course, that is also a benefit that parents will have. But that is definitely not the most important thing. Children help us relieve stress; they will help us when they grow up, and they may become successful in their careers. But most of all, they should be treated as human beings whose lives are the most valuable thing.

Work Cited

Soan, Sue. Improving outcomes for looked-after children: a practical guide to raising aspirations and achievement. London: Optimus Education, 2010. Print.

Sofaer, Joanna R.. Children and material culture. London: Routledge, 2000. Print.